You are invited to participate in a research study regarding your experiences as a member of your native Wikipedia Community. This research is being conducted by Sejal Khatri at the University of Washington. We would love to schedule a time to talk with you about your community's participation activities, as well as how you contribute and engage with other community members. Ultimately, we hope to use this knowledge to begin to understand the factors that influence the success of online communities.

If you agree to be in the study, you will participate in an interview with a researcher which should last between 60 and 90 minutes and will be conducted remotely via voice or video chat or in-person at a location of your preference.
